FLAGS PRESENTED TO PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Patriotic Societies of Bristol Make Gifts With Elaborate Ceremonies in the Township.

Patriotism ran high on Saturday afternoon when flags were presented to the Newportville and Badger public schools by the Federation of Patriotic Societies of Bristol. A large delegation of the federation, accompanied by the Liberty Fife and Drum Corps, went to Newportville. Gathered in the schoolhouse, William Messmyer, secretary of the federation, called the meeting to order and introduced William A. Bradley as chairman of the committee, who would act as master of ceremonies. Silas King made the opening prayer, after which "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean" was sung.

A most enjoyable exercise was given by the scholars of Newportville. The excellent rendition of the exercise reflected great credit upon the teacher of the school. The Liberty Fife and Drum Corps then favored with a selection. Mr. Bradley then gave the "History of Our Country's Flag." W. Harry Lyndall, president of the federation, then presented the flag to the school as follows:

PRESENTATION SPEECH

The public school is established on the principle that the intelligence, integrity and patriotism of the people constitute the foundation of free government. Our public schools, therefore, form the chief corner stone of the American Republic. They are the sheet-anchor of our hope. The growth and prosperity which has followed our nation's existence has excited the wonder and admiration of the world. What shall be written of her at the end of another century will depend largely upon the manner in which our schools perform their mission. In the 256,000 public schools of this nation, under the training and tuition of 500,000 teachers there are today 20,000,000 children who will in the next generation shape and control the destinies of a great people. Upon them and their children will depend the future glory or shame of the American people. No other nation since the world began has had a history such as ours. But what of the future? What story will another century tell? The teachers of this day and hour are answering these questions. There must be no sectarianism or the political or religious in our public schools, but there must be truth and duty there. It is not enough that a boy should be educated mentally. The safety of our nation, as well as his own usefulness and happiness, demand that he should be trained to habits of truthfulness and develop a fine temper of honor. He should be inspired to form exalted ideals of manhood, charity and goodness, and made strong in the resolution to defend the truth.

A boy may be able to solve the most complicated problems in mathematics and answer all the questions propounded at a final examination, but if he be depraved in his morals his scholarly attainments will prove no guarantee of his value to the nation, or usefulness to himself or the world. The time has come when the pupils of our public schools must be taught love of country. That means that the children of this nation must learn to love their native land. To whom shall we look for the inculcation of those patriotic sentiments which shall inspire the heart of every American citizen, but to the 500,000 teachers of our public schools.

Though the work of the different organizations represented here today, the emblem of our nation's glory, which has hitherto been unfurled only in times of bloody conflict or holiday occasions, is now seen floating peacefully in the sunlight over nearly all the buildings dedicated to the education of the nation's youth.

Aye! and the custom inaugurated by our orders will spread over all the land. Over every school house, in hamlet and in city, in country and in town, in the east and in the west, in the north and the south, the American flag will be kissed by the morning breeze. Twenty millions of children will see it every day and learn to love it as the emblem of all that is good. It will represent to us and all the world in a new and peculiar manner the great fundamental truth that the bulwarks of our liberty is in the education of the people. The man who loves his country loves his country's flag as well and delights to see its folds unfurled in the free air, teaching with silent eloquence a lesson of patriotism that language cannot express. It is that spirit and desire that brings us here this afternoon to place over this school the American flag.

It therefore affords me great pleasure on behalf of the Federation of Patriotic Orders of Bristol, composed of Fidelity Council No. 21, F. P. A.; Washington Camp No. 789, P. O. S. of A.; Bristol Council No. 58, D. of A., and J. S. Brady Commandery, No. 57, P. O. S. of A., to present to you the Board of Directors of this school this beautiful emblem, "Our Country's Flag."

THE FLAG ACCEPTED

Dr. Horace Heckenstine, in behalf of the school board, accepted the flag. The company then repaired to the school yard, where the flag was raised to the top of the pole, the drum corps playing the "Star Spangled Banner." The children then sang "Rally 'round the Flag Boys," and the Liberty Guards fired a salute.

AT BADGER SCHOOL

The Bristolians then marched to Badger school, where the meeting was called to order by George J. Cramer, vice president of the federation, and introduced the chairman. After prayer by the chairman and singing by the audience, the children of the school rendered a delightful exercise which was thoroughly enjoyed and heartily applauded.

Russell Carty then delivered an interesting address on "Our Orders," which is given below. President Lyndall presented the flag, which was accepted by the teacher, Miss Jennie Tomlinson, her words of acceptance being enjoyed by all. After hauling the flag to the top of the pole the children sang "Rally 'round the Flag Boys," and the guards fired a salute. The singing at both schools was led by George F. Cramer.

"OUR ORDERS"

Mr. Carty's address was as follows:

We have met here today for the purpose of perpetuating or renewing, as it were, a custom which until a few years ago was prompted wholly by patriotic instincts and public sentiment generally, but a few years ago there was inserted in the school code of Pennsylvania a clause which required the stars and stripes to float on or near every public school house, so what was at one time a custom prompted by sentiment, is now a duty. We are here representing the Federation of Patriotic Societies of Bristol. That federation comprises the patriotic orders of our town, and those orders represent in the State of Pennsylvania alone about 300,000 native born Americans, and it is to those orders that I wish to call your attention for a few moments.

The objects of the orders we represent are: To inculcate pure American principles, to teach loyalty to American institutions, to cultivate fraternal affections, to oppose foreign interference in State or National affairs; to oppose all appropriations of public moneys for sectarian purposes, to preserve the constitution of the United States, to defend and maintain the American system of public schools.

Next to love for the Creator, we believe that patriotism is one of the highest and noblest affections of the human soul. We believe that without patriotic citizens the institutions of no country are safe, and that none will so jealously guard and protect them as those born and reared under their influence. We believe that the truly patriotic American must first be a good citizen in his obedience to the laws and an honest exercise of the power of the ballot, and to this end we pronounce against political corruption and any subversion of the will of the people legally expressed, and we pledge ourselves to aid in guaranteeing to all citizens their constitutional rights and a free and potent participation in the affairs of government as contemplated by the founders of our Republic.

We claim the public free schools are the training schools of many virtues and the living springs that feed the stream of human progress. The duty of the State is to prepare its youth so that they become useful citizens, and the public school houses, that bulwark of our country's greatness, should be jealously guarded by every American. The first command of Penn, the last injunction of Washington was "educate the people." We demand the restriction of immigration, not on account of race or religious creed, but upon physical, mental and moral grounds that our country may cease to be filled with criminals, idiots, cripples, insane and paupers. With these exceptions, we cordially welcome all foreigners who come to this country with the honest desire of becoming loyal American citizens, and who sincerely disavow any and all allegiance to foreign potentates and governments and who honor and revere our National flag. We believe that in the problem of immigration this nation is facing one of the gravest problems of recent years and we have been and are using every effort at our command in behalf of anything that even looks like legislation to the end of excluding the undesirable element. You will recall no doubt the history of the Burnett-Dillingham bill. There was an Immigration Commission appointed, composed of Senators, Congressmen and government officials, and after four years searching investigation at home and abroad unanimously concluded that substantial restriction is demanded by economic, moral and social consideration, and recommended an increased head tax, fining the steamship companies for bringing undesirables, debarring illiterate adults and other methods for excluding undesirable immigrants that our Orders have been urging upon Congress for years. The Burnett-Dillingham bill was the result. Then it was surprising to notice the effort put forth to defeat the bill. However, after a great deal of debating the bill finally passed the Senate, also the House, and then went to the President for his signature. Here again every effort possible was put forth in opposition, and on February 14, 1913, the last day on which he had to act, he sent the bill back to the Senate, with a twelve line veto message saying he withheld his signature with great reluctance, as the bill contained many favorable amendments, but he could not make up his mind to sign it.

On February 18, 1913, the Senate, after a two days' debate, passed the bill over the veto, by more than the two-thirds required by the Constitution, the vote being 72 to 18. The following day the bill came up in the House and barely failed to get the necessary two-thirds, the vote being 214 to 113. A change of only five votes would have put this much needed legislation on the Federal statute books.

Not only have our Orders been busy in the National Capitol, but in our own State at Harrisburg last year we took a prominent part in the cause of the Pennsylvania Bible bill, which was passed by the State Legislature with but one dissenting vote, and which requires that at least ten verses shall be read from the Holy Bible every day in the public school. The organizations here represented seem to take a particular pride in these three great factions in connection with our glorious heritage, "The Holy Bible," "Public Schools" and "The Flag."

Our country's welfare, her existence, perhaps depends upon our system of public education, which now so successfully supplies the needs of our people. First of all we must have education to enable us to properly understand our duties as citizens of a free country. Free education is one of the peculiar glories which Americans hold very precious. We place the Bible in the school room, not to teach sectarianism, but because it contains the purest code of morals the world has ever known, and we place our flag over it to teach the children their first lesson in patriotism. Thus we have three important elements that seem to go hand-in-hand with each other, and which are so vital to our National existence. In addition to the objects which I have tried to present to you we have a duty to perform in relation to ourselves, that of assisting to bear one another's burdens. These organizations, therefore, each have a system of sick and death benefits peculiar to their own resources.

I have tried to picture to you the work in which we are engaged and I do not want anyone to get the impression that this work is all done yet. There has never been a more urgent need for organizations, such as ours, to stand up and show their colors, than now, and there never has been a time when men were needed to band themselves together as now, and therefore, I would urge upon all those eligible to affiliate themselves with at least one of the organizations here represented. I don't care which one, but what I do ask is that all get into the ranks.

SOME FIRST THINGS

The first through transcontinental railroad, the Union Pacific, was completed forty-five years ago, affording rail connection between the East and the rapidly growing communities of the Pacific slope. The Union Pacific was the only transcontinental line until 1883, when three rival lines entered into competition for the traffic and opened up much new country. In that year the Southern Pacific linked up its line from New Orleans to California, the Northern Pacific was completed from Minnesota to Washington on Puget Sound, and the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, with its connections, formed a fourth road of steel across the continent. In the meantime the first attempt to build a Canadian transcontinental line, initiated in 1873, ... in scandal and failure. The first number of the New York Herald, then called the Morning Herald, was issued seventy-nine years ago by James Gordon Bennett & Company, from a tiny publication office in the basement of 20 Wall street. Bennett, father of the present owner of the Herald, was a native of Scotland, and had had journalistic experience as reporter and editor on papers in New York, Albany, Charleston, Philadelphia and Washington before he launched the Herald with a capital of $500. The Herald, like the Sun, which had been established less than two years before, was originally a one-cent paper, although both of these great journals are now among the very few metropolitan papers selling for more than a cent. The Herald entered a field where there were already seven large daily papers and eight smaller afternoon journals—quite enough, it would seem, for a city with a population of little more than a quarter of a million. The first number of the Herald was ten by fourteen inches and it contained twelve short columns of reading matter and four columns of "ads." The following year the paper was enlarged and the price raised to two cents.

The first settlement on the site of Louisville, Ky., was established in ... when Capt. Thomas Bullitt, a surveyor, laid out the town, which was formally established by an act of the Virginia Legislature on May 1, just 134 years ago. Kentucky was then a county of Virginia, although an attempt to form a separate state called Transylvania had been made in 1775. For many years Lexington was the chief town of Kentucky, and it was there that the first newspaper west of Pittsburgh, the Kentucky Gazette, was founded in 1787. In 1792 Kentucky became a state. After Captain Bullitt and his surveying party left Louisville the site was deserted for five years, but in 1778 Col. George Roger Clarke led a party of thirteen families to the place to establish a permanent settlement. The town was named Louisville in honor of Louis of France, whose soldiers aided the Americans in the Revolution. By 1828 Louisville had become the most important city of the state and was incorporated as a full-fledged city.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

What is a telephone, anyway?

It seems as if this were a useless question now-a-days, but do you know the theory of the telephone? It is worth knowing about.

The telephone transmitter is modeled after the human ear. The air waves caused by the voice strike a metal diaphragm and result in pressure upon fine carbon granules behind the diaphragm. Varying pressures cause varying electrical impulses which flow through these granules and speed along the wires and, in turn, influence the magnets in the telephone receiver at the other end of the line, where, by means of another diaphragm, the vibrations are reproduced into sound.

The standard Bell Telephone of to-day contains sixty parts in the transmitter and fifty-five parts in the receiver. It is the product of many inventions—many betterments—and is equally clear and strong for two miles or two thousand.

Every Bell Telephone is a standard telephone ready always to render the most efficient telephone service in the world.

When you telephone, smile!

PENROSE DOOMED.

The result of the primary election was a complete demonstration that the voters of Pennsylvania are determined to send Senator Penrose to the political scrap heap.

In spite of the most desperate efforts on the part of the Republican organization in every county to secure a huge vote in the primaries for Penrose, the returns show that only 200,000 voted for him out of a total enrollment 681,485. The 200,000 represents the number claimed to have signed Penrose petitions. Taft's vote in 1908 was 745,779 and 273,305 in 1912 when Roosevelt swept the State. Roosevelt's vote in this State in 1904 was 840,619.

Penrose's opponents at the primaries last week polled a clear majority against him, and in spite of the fact that every circumstance of election day, including the weather, campaign funds and number of disciplined party workers, were all in his favor.

It is safe to assume that fully 80 per cent. of the vote which was not cast on Tuesday is against Penrose, for it is in the rural districts and in the interior cities that the sentiment against Senator Penrose has always been most substantial, and it was just in these places that the vote was not cast, owing to the fact that a backward spring caused the farmers last week to take advantage of the first warm spell to work in their fields. Election day was an ideal day for such occupations, and it caused a slump in the rural vote that will entirely vanish in the cool days of November.

Even in the City of Philadelphia where the Republican machine was on its mettle and labored diligently to roll up a huge vote for Penrose and Brumbaugh, the Penrose vote sank under 100,000 in a Republican enrollment of 126,000. Western counties, where Penrose spent two weeks in a personal campaign, turned in majorities against him, while in Allegheny where the Oliver machine was counted on to roll up a great majority, Penrose slipped through with less than 10,000 votes to spare in a poll of 60,000.

Whether the fake enrollment figures of the Republican organization are accepted or not, the Penrose cause is in equally bad condition. If, as the machine organs report, there are 600,000 enrolled Republican voters in Pennsylvania, and Penrose can secure only 200,000 with the efforts that were put forth in his behalf he is hopelessly defeated in November. On the other hand, if, as appears certain, the Republican enrollment reaches only 400,000 Penrose is laboring under the necessity of showing not only that the 200,000 enrolled Republicans who failed to vote against him in the primaries are in favor of his election, but that 200,000 other independent citizens, who failed to enroll at all, or are enrolled in other party columns, will rally to his standard in November. Either expectation is ridiculous on its face.

THE INTELLIGENCER'S FAKE.

The Doylestown Intelligencer, commenting upon the failure of Dr. J. Ernest Scott, of New Hope, to file a legal petition as Washington party candidate for State Senator, very maliciously charges the Washington party leaders with an attempt to betray Dr. Scott's candidacy in the interest of George Ross, the Democratic candidate.

The accusation is a base slander and we have no doubt that the Intelligencer knew it to be when it made the charge. Clarence Buckman's attempt to add the nomination would probably have been effective if the chairman of the Washington party committee had not gotten busy after it was discovered that Dr. Scott's petition had been returned to him, after it was too late to get additonal signatures, and mailed "stickers" to Washington party voters in various sections of the county, thus checkmating Buckman's and the Intelligencer's plan to steal the nomination.

Dr. Scott was nominated at the primaries by the use of these stickers and will be a candidate to the finish, and he also proposes to campaign the whole county against the Grundy machine.

On Wednesday Dr. Scott issued this statement:

"There was no deal on between the Washington and Democratic parties as to the State Senatorship relating to my withdrawal and the substitution of the Democratic candidate. I am in the race to stay and am after the goods."

The Doylestown Democrat, Senator Webster Grim's newspaper, comments upon the fake tale as follows:

"Credit for considerable political ingenuity must be given to the Grundy organ at Doylestown for the invention of the story, published in Monday's issue, that Dr. J. Ernest Scott, of New Hope, Washington party candidate for State Senator, was the prospective victim at and before the primaries of "an attempted betrayal" on the part of the Washington party leaders. As an invention to cover up the effect of machine leaders to capture the Washington party nomination for Mr. Grundy's candidate, Senator Clarence J. Buckman, the story of the attempted betrayal isn't half bad; indeed, it's real clever.

The weak point in the story is that it isn't true. Nobody, so far as we can learn, ever heard of a scheme on the part of the Washington party leaders to keep Dr. Scott's vote on at the primaries, afterwards withdraw him and substitute the name of George Ross, of Doylestown, the Democratic candidate, thus creating a fusion." The only basis for such a wild vagary, if it were not invented for a purpose, would be an hallucination in the brain of the Grundy organ's editorial writer.

It required the official count to determine the winner in the Democratic Congressional contest in this district. At the primary election last week Harry Grim, Esq., of Bucks county, defeated the present incumbent of the office, Robert E. Difenderfer, of Montgomery. Mr. Grim has announced that he will campaign in every section of the district and "will neither ask nor give any quarter from or to the Grundy machine." Ere the idea of November there will be political strife of a strenuous nature in Bucks and Montgomery counties.

THE TRIBUNE CALLS FOR DEFEAT OF PENROSE.

The New York Tribune, the historic organ of the Republican party since the days of Horace Greeley; consistent supporter of Republican nominees, and a leading advocate of the candidacy of Mr. Taft in 1912, printed the following editorial, under the caption "Pennsylvania should unite on Pinchot and defeat Penroseism." The editorial was printed after Penrose won at the primaries:

Mr. Penrose should be beaten.

It will be a bad thing for public life in America if the forces which he represents triumph in the Pennsylvania senatorship contest. It will be a ruinous thing for the Republican party if Mr. Penrose and his kind come to the front in it once more.

His defeat will save the state of Pennsylvania from the discredit of unworthy representation in the United States senate. It will stem the tide of reaction of which his victory in the primaries is an ominous sign. And the Republican party will be stronger when it enters the next national campaign with Penrose in the background rather than in the foreground.

The party must keep faith with the public if it is to have any hope of regaining its vigor. It must reject reactionary leadership everywhere and at all times.

This recrudescence of Penrose is a challenge to the progressive element in the Republican party everywhere. There must be no compromise with the forces of reaction. The party's house must be thoroughly cleaned and the party completely re-organized. If a real fight is not made, if drastic steps are not taken, the old machine will be found, as in Pennsylvania, to have profited by the undeniable swing away from President Wilson and to be as firmly intrenched in power as it was when it brought the party to disruption in 1912.

It is because the issue is so big, so vitally important to the country and to the party, that the Tribune has no sympathy with the cowardly counsels that have prevailed in Pennsylvania and that have enabled Penrose to win his victory at the primaries.

It has been argued there that Penrose represented the best chance of success at the election, that he had the machine and the support of the "interests." Newspapers in Philadelphia which were supposed to stand for independence of the machine have kept silent, either at the bidding of the forces behind Mr. Penrose or for fear of impairing the Republican party's chances.

The selfish interests may profit by Penrose's success, but it will be costly victory for the Republican pary which brings him forward as an embodiment of its aims and an index of its character.

The Tribune hopes that Pennsylvania will elect Mr. Gifford Pinchot, the candidate of the Progressive party, as its next senator. He is a worthier candidate than the man chosen at the Democratic primaries. The necessity for defeating Penroseism transcends all partisan consideration. Opposition to it should not be divided. The Democratic candidate ought to withdraw. All citizens, irrespective of party affiliations, should unite in support of Mr. Pinchot.

The Bosses Coming Back.

N. Y. Evening Mail.

It is not surprising that the sweeping Penrose victory in the Pennsylvania Republican primaries should have instantly chilled and checked the growing feeling that the Republican organization, national and state, was working out its freedom from bosses of the Penrose, Barnes and Gallinger type.

There have been many protestations of independence of the old boss rule, and it is but just to say that many sincere Republicans have striven earnestly and energetically to rehabilitate the party and establish it on a basis that all opponents of the Democratic party could accept.

They fought Barnes in the organization of the Assembly at Albany last January, but made little headway against him.

They fought Penrose in the senatorial primaries in Pennsylvania last Tuesday, with a result so disastrous to their purposes that the New York "Tribune" declares that the hope of Republican success in 1916 will be shattered if Penrose is not defeated at the polls next November.

Even Gallinger, of New Hampshire, who has succeeded Aldrich, of Rhode Island's $20,000,000 trolley system, as the leader of the "standpat" Republican senators at Washington, now announces that, like Penrose, he proposes to be a candidate for re-election.

The Republicans of New Hampshire, therefore, like the Republicans of Pennsylvania, are doomed to carry the burden of the old "system" in the campaign next fall.

In Ohio, the old guard are confident that Foraker will win easily in the senatorial primaries, while in our own state of New York, the smooth Mr. Barnes proposes to name the successor to Senator Root, and as much of the state ticket as he may deem it prudent to take over.

Such is the prophetic picture in barest outline of Republican plan and purpose in three of the leading states.

Have Barnes and Penrose and Gallinger and Foraker lost their cunning in politics? Do they believe they can leave the dark recesses to which they fled after 1912, without inviting another defeat for the party to which they profess so much loyalty?

Are they Republicans only so long as they control and dominate the party, having not the slightest interest in its success unless their, only selfish purpose is served by victory?

A Republican party in which every Republican would have equal voice; in which the independent and unselfish opinions of its rank and file would find full expression, has been the hope of many voters who regard Democratic ascendency as a menace to national prosperity and progress.

It is a conceded fact that there has been a drift to the party the past year among voters of this class. They have been willing to ignore and forget much of the past because of their hope that the work of rehabilitation, carried on so persistently and enthusiastically by Republicans of high purpose and real conviction, would restore the party to the splendid place it held for half a century in the confidence and affection of the country.

The result in Pennsylvania dim that prospect, if it does not wholly wipe it out. The New York "Tribune" in an editorial which we reprint elsewhere, regards the Penrose victory as "a challenge to the progressive element in the Republican party everywhere."

That is the fact.

A Quaker Pilgrimage.

Editor Gazette:—It is probable that as far back in human history, "as that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary," men have been prone to "go on pilgrimage" at divers times to places noted in sacred or profane history, and to visit sites made memorable by the lives of men and women who there had "a local habitation and a name," and it thus came to pass that on Seventh day, the 23rd of the present month, a band of "Friends and friendly people," about 150 in number, came up to ancient Burlington on the "swift and splendid steamer" Columbia, to visit places in the old city connected with the early history of the settlement of this part of the country.

The pilgrims disembarked within a stone-throw of the ancient sycamore which now stands upon the easterly end of the "Green Bank," and was the mooring post of the good ship "Shield," with its cargo of English Friends, which arrived in the upper Delaware in 1678, four years prior to the founding of Penn's "City of Brotherly Love" twenty miles farther down the river.

Under the guidance of two of Burlington's daughters, Amelia Mott Gummere, of Haverford, and Margaret Haines, of Burlington, who were well acquainted with all the points of antiquarian interest in their native city, the company were shown many sites and houses of great interest. Among these were the site of Thomas Gardiner's house, on north High street, where the Friends held their meetings for a time after their landing; the site of the office of the Colonial Governor Jennings, a contemporary of Penn, where also the Colonial money was printed by Franklin, and where Samuel Smith's "History of Nova Caesarea, or New Jersey," was printed in 1765; houses formerly occupied by notables, such as Stephen Grellet, "the Quaker Missionary," George Dilwyn, an eminent minister among the Friends; Governor Bloomfield; Captain James Lawrence, whose "Don't Give Up the Ship" is a household word, and the birthplace of James Fenimore Cooper, the eminent writer. Some of the company also visited the house where Isaac Collins lived. He was a printer in Colonial times, and one of the first publishers of the Bible in this country.

After these visits the company gathered in the present meeting house, erected in 1781, taking the place of a six-sided brick house built in 1684, directly in the rear of the site of its successor. We were here entertained most pleasantly by an address from Henry S. Haines, who is a sort of encyclopedia upon the antiquities of Burlington and its neighborhood, and who, although almost an octogenarian, still practises his profession of civil engineering quite vigorously and successfully. He is also the Surveyor-General of the Proprietors of West Jersey, the site of their original office being still pointed out. In their present new quarters there are many invaluable records of early Colonial history carefully stored away, a copy of one of which was shown the visitors upon the screen, with other slides illustrating the talk.

Surveyor-General Haines told the pilgrims many interesting things about the early settlement of the colony, interspersing his address with a number of anecdotes which added zest to the story.

He told us something about the pleasant relations which always existed between the natives and the settlers; quite a contrast with conditions in many other places. He told of an Indian who, at a "talk" with his white neighbors said, in substance, that there was a wide path open, wide enough for both the Indians and the white folks to walk in. If, said he, Englishman find Indian asleep in the path, he look at him and pass on. If Indian see Englishman asleep there he will look at him, say, Englishman like to sleep, let him alone, and go his way.

The early Episcopalians and their Quaker neighbors did not, evidently, always dwell together in love and unity as became brethren. In an address by the first Bishop of New Jersey, Bishop Talbot, he is reported as speaking of the Friends in anything but complimentary terms, and the "odium theologicum" ran so high across the river that, in an old map, we are shown "The Christian Graveyard" and the "Quaker Burying Ground," but, as we were told, things are different now.

When the speaker had concluded his address the visitors adjourned to the lawn in the rear of the meeting house where, under the shade of two ancient sycamores, known to have been saplings in 1684, they partook of a picnic lunch which was greatly helped out by coffee and ice cream, furnished by the local hosts. Looking over the sociable and orderly gathering of elderly, middle-aged and younger Friends, one was reminded of the last words of Stonewall Jackson after receiving his mortal wounds—"Let us cross over the river and sit under the shade of the trees"; the rays of the westering sun through the branches, the songs of the birds, and the hum of pleasant conversation, all combining to make the occasion one which will long linger on memory's page. The Philadelphia visitors left in the early evening on the old "Bristol," doubtless carrying home with them the recollection of an afternoon both pleasantly and profitably spent.

If You Must Drink Booze.

Kansas City Star.

Mrs. James Watson, editor and publisher of the Dearborn, Mo., Democrat, has the following suggestion to make to booze fighters: "To the married man who cannot get along without his drinks, we suggest the following as a means to freedom from the bondage of the habit. Start a saloon in your own house. Be the only customer. You will have no license to pay. Go to your wife and get her $2 to buy a gallon of whiskey and remember there are sixty-nine drinks in one gallon. Buy your drinks from no one except your wife, and by the time the first gallon is gone, she will have $8 to put in the bank and $2 to start business again. Should you live ten years and continue to buy booze from her and then die with snakes in your boots, she will have money to bury you decently, educate your children, buy a house and lot, and marry a decent man and quit thinking about you."

REVIEW OF EVENTS AT COUNTY SEAT

Interesting Correspondence from Our Doylestown Representative.

Doylestown, May 27.

Of course election is and has been the principal topic of conversation among all the people at the county seat during the past week and comparison of figures with the vote cast last fall seem to indicate to the many Republicans who are opposed to Brumbaugh, Penrose, Watson, et al, that next fall may show a majority for the Progressive ticket especially if the promised visit of Teddy with one of his whirlwind trips from the upper to the lower end materializes. By the hardest kind of work and the expenditure of considerable money the McCormick-Palmer combine carried the Democratic end of the county by small majorities leaving a factional feeling that will be fanned to a blaze, if possible, by the adherents of Grundy. Grundy, as boss, is more firmly fixed in the saddle than ever before and it will take a mighty upheaval to weaken his grasp on the party control.

The lining up of the various forces for the November election has already commenced and all weak points are being looked after. This is the advantage of the almost perfect organization that Grundy has built up and the various men in line for county offices will be called on at once to get busy and strengthen all waverers; still with Teddy as a vital force to be reckoned with the fight has a great element of uncertainity in it and will not be decided until the votes are counted.

June term of criminal court will begin next Monday and will probably be a short one. There are only twenty-five cases on the list for trial and the longest one, the Plewka murder case, has been continued until September at the urgent request of his attorneys, although Plewka himself wanted to insist on being tried. Nine of the cases are against John Leary and Robert Eveland and will not take very long so that court will be short, much shorter than any criminal court for a long time. None of the cases to be tried are very serious, being principally for minor offenses many of them being for two or more offenses alleged to have been committed by the same individual. Among them will be Charles A. Wilson, of Bristol, with two charges of embezzlement.

This year there is to be a decided effort to prevent violations of illegal fishing and already the officers are hot on the trail of violators of the law. Last Saturday night Officers Atkinson and Hendricks had an exciting chase after some Montgomery county parties and while they failed to capture them they will soon have their names and places of residence and they will be obliged to pay their fines. These three men have been making a practice of coming over to Bucks county every Friday and Saturday night gigging but as they have always changed their location their detection was difficult but having found out about who they were they were watched last Saturday night and observed to leave the train at the Farm School and proceed in the direction of the Neshaminy. The officers soon located them but when the giggers found there was some one on their trail they put out their lights and concealed themselves in the underbrush but it is hardly likely they will make another attempt very soon. Aaron and Walter Vanluvanee, of just above the town were unfortunate enough to be caught and were compelled to pay the fine of twenty dollars and costs and they say never again for them.

St. Anns Club, an organization connected with St. Pauls Episcopal church at the county seat, under the management of Mrs. Thomas Ross, will give a Rose Fete on a very elaborate scale at Rosscommon on the afternoon of June 6th next. The programme is modeled to some extent at least, after the May Day Fete recently given at Bryn Mawr College, and like that will consist of marches, dances, plays, etc., to be followed by a cold collation after the performances are over. The young ladies have put in a great deal of time already on rehearsals and in the opinion of some who have been fortunate enough to see them rehearse it will certainly redound credit on all of the participants and another star to the triumphs of the county seat.

At last the new chemical auto of the county seat fire company has arrived and is now ready for action. Yesterday afternoon the committee in charge of the purchase of the new fire fighting machine took it over the principal streets of the borough to enable the residents to see just what had become of a part of their money and if the machine is anywhere near as good as it looks it will certainly be a great addition to our apparatus. Soon after it was housed and before it was cleaned up the fire bell sounded and the new machine was soon on its way to a fire at the Burpee Seed Farm, about a mile and a half out of town and as the fire was only a soot fire and soon extinguished, a fair test of the new machine's ability could not be had but there was another test and that was the continued interference of the trolley car with our apparatus when on their way to a fire. A Willow Grove car took no notice of the signal to hold up and had the fire been a serious one much valuable time would have been lost by the stupidity or worse of the trolley car crew. The trolleys were not the only smart people in evidence—several automobiles, some of them purposely, got in the way of the car and refused to give it the right of way. Naturally many firemen are much incensed and an arrangement was immediately made by which the next offender will realize the fact that the law imposes a severe penalty upon persons who thus interfere with fire apparatus. One enforcement of the law will probably be sufficient to convince people that they do not own the earth and that public rights take precedence of private ones.

With the high school commencement fixed for June 23 the school board has so far failed to secure a speaker for the occasion. Just why they always leave until the last minute this important feature of the commencement is known only to themselves, but it is so nearly every year and there is no reason for it.

County Superintendent Hoffman is one of the examiners this year at the Lock Haven State Normal School, and a better selection could not well have been made. Maybe he will select a wife while on his trip and put an end to the uneasiness of many of his spinster friends who wonder why he is proof against all of Cupid's arrows. It is certainly his own fault for he has had lots of opportunities.

Pool rooms, bowling alleys and the like will hereafter come under the supervision of the members of the Adult Bible Classes. A wise supervision that does not tend to interfere with the personal liberty of the young men who frequent such places is all right but any attempt to place restrictions around them without first getting the approval of those interested will result in more harm than good. Too much supervision is more harmful than none at all.

A MESSAGE TO WOMEN

Who Are "Just Ready to Drop."

When you are "just ready to drop," when you feel so weak that you can hardly drag yourself about—and because you have not slept well, you get up as tired-out next morning as when you went to bed, you need help.

Miss Lea Dumas writes from Malone, N. Y., saying: "I was in a badly run-down condition for several weeks but two bottles of Vinol put me on my feet again and made me strong and well. Vinol has done me more good than all the other medicines I ever took."

If the careworn, run-down women, the pale, sickly children and feeble old folks around here would follow Miss Dumas' example, they, too, would soon be able to say that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, had built them up and made them strong.

It is a wonderful, strength creator and body-builder, and we sell it under a guarantee of satisfaction. You get your money back if Vinol does not help you.

P. S. For any skin trouble try our Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

Put on Your Glasses

AND READ THIS:

I can stand for the chap with the monogramed shirt,
And the boy with his trousers upturned;
And the man with the hat made of plush I assert,
I can stand, though the fad I have spurned.
I can stand for the guy with the white in his vest,
And not even grin when he passes,
But I snicker and smile, when I gaze on, the while,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

I don't mind the man with the rakish green hat
With the bow in the back, nor the fellow
Who trims off each shoe with an up-to-date spat,
Nor the brother whose gloves are bright yellow.
But I'm ready to flee, when that dandy I see,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

I can put up with him who must trim off each sleeve
With a row of pearl buttons, and note
In silence the man (though I secretly grieve)
With the braid on the edge of his coat.
The man with the handkerchief worn to be seen
I can master my feelings in classes.
But I am scared to smile, with my left and my right,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

All the go, however.

SONG OF CLAN ALPINE.

Hail to the chief who in triumph advances!
Honored and blessed be the ever green pine!
Long may the tree, in his banner that glances,
Flourish, the shelter and grace of our line!
Heaven send it happy dew,
Earth lend it sap anew;
Gayly to bourgeon and broadly to grow,
While every highland glen
Sends our shout back again,
"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho, ieroe!"

Ours is no sapling, chance sown by the fountain,
Blooming at Beltane, in winter to fade;
When the whirlwind has stripped every leaf from the mountain
The more shall Clan Alpine exult in her shade.
Moored in the rifted rock,
Proof to the tempest's shock,
Firmer he roots him the ruder it blow;
Menteith and Breadalbane, then,
Echo his praise again,
"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho, ieroe!"

Proudly our pibroch has thrilled in Glen Fruin,
And Bannochar's groans to our slogan replied,
Glen Luss and Ross dhu, they are smoking in ruin,
And the best of Loch Lomond lie dead on her side.
Widow and Saxon maid
Long shall lament our raid,
Think of Clan Alpine with fear and with woe;
Lennox and Leven glen
Shake when they hear again,
"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho, ieroe!"

Row, vassals, row, for the pride of the highlands!
Stretch to your oars for the evergreen pine!
Oh, that the rosebud that graces yon islands
Were wreathed in a garland around him to twine!
Oh, that some seedling gem,
Worthy such noble stem,
Honored and blessed in their shadow might grow!
Loud should Clan Alpine then
Ring from her deepmost glen,
"Roderigh Vich Alpine dhu, ho, ieroe!"
—Sir Walter Scott.

MALE PRINCIPAL FOR HIGH SCHOOL

Mr. Brumbaugh and Miss Wells, Both College Graduates, Will Be New Teachers in Bristol.

At a special executive session of the Bristol school board held on Tuesday evening, from which all newspaper representatives were excluded Harry Brumbaugh, of Franklin county, a graduate of Dickinson College, Carlisle, was elected principal of the high school for a term of two years at a salary of $95 a month. Mr Brumbaugh, who is a relative of the Republican candidate for governor, will in the fall succeed Miss Vanuxem. He will be the only male teacher that the local public schools have had for over thirty years.

Miss Charlotte Wells, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., a graduate of Columbia University, was elected a teacher in the high school for one year at a salary of $70 per month.

The annual tax rate was fixed at 85 cents on the $100 valuation, the same as heretofore. Seventy cents will be devoted to general school purposes and fifteen cents to the building account.

The report of the tax collector was received and the list of delinquents referred to the Finance committee. The full membership of the board was present.

BONDS HELD ILLEGALLY.

Owing to the fact that the session was a secret one the Gazette is unable to let the public know all the business that was transacted, but it is rumored that the recent auditing of the finances of the school district disclosed that some of the bonds issued in connection with the Jefferson avenue school will not stand a legal test and that the board intends to pay them off.

Also the tax collector presented a list of names, amounting to over a thousand dollars. The board refused to accept the list as it was found that some of the names represented men who are working in the mills.

FIVE NEW CARS FOR TROLLEY LINE

Manager M. J. Hill is showing his interest and desire for a Greater Bristol, in his efforts to give the best trolley service that can be had. Mr. Hill has ordered for June delivery five up-to-date cars for the local line. The new cars will be larger than the present ones and will be of the latest type, of steel construction. They will be forty-four feet in length and eight feet in width. The framework will be of steel, the sides being a continuous steel plate. They will have arched roofs with the Brill ventilating system. They will have the Headley anti-climber bumpers, which in case of collision prevents the cars from telescoping, thus protecting the motormen and passengers from serious injury. Each car will be equipped with the H. B. life guards. The guards are of the latest style, and cover the rails on straight tracks and curves alike.

The platforms will be two feet larger than the present ones. Passengers will get on and off at the front of the car, the conductor having his place just back of the motorman, and collecting the fares as the passengers enters the car. Each car will have a seating capacity of fifty.

Along the outside of the windows will be wire screens which will prevent passengers from putting their arms out of the windows, and thus avoiding many accidents. Push buttons will be in each window post for passengers to notify the motorman to stop. The doors and steps will be of the folding style. The cars will be lighted by Mazda lamps with the Holophane reflectors, insuring good lights at all times.

Illuminated signs of the Hunter type will be placed on the front and along side of the door, showing plainly the point of destination.

Double trucks will be placed under each car, with one hundred and fifty horse power motors. The cars will be painted on the outside in colors similar to the present ones, the inside being finished in cherry. For winter the cars will be heated by hot air heaters and the newest ventilating system. The Rico sanitary hand straps will be used.

Manager Hill expects the cars to be delivered to him about June 22, so that the greater facilities and comforts can be given by the first of July.

SAYS TEXAS RULER COULD WHIP MEXICO

Letter From Bristolian's Relative Predicts a Bloody War With the Mexicans.

From a private letter written to a relative in Bristol from Corpus Christi, Texas dated May 16, the following is an interesting extract relative to the Mexican imbroglio:

"We are 150 miles from the border here and are in no danger whatever. Our little city has a Mexican population of 5000 and in addition to this number we have about 1000 refugees. The latter are well-to-do people, some of them very wealthy. They are persons who have been engaged in different businesses in Mexico, most all of them Huerta followers. The soldiers have been going through here for the past month whole train loads. About two months ago General Leonard Wood was here for a couple of days looking the situation over. There is no question in my mind but what we are going to have a bloody war. If Mr. Wilson had listened to the War Board which advised him to take Vera Cruz and then cut the wires to Mexico City and load its 15,000 soldiers aboard the train the city could have been taken without the loss of many lives, but he thought Bryan and John Lind were better posted and now it will cost thousands of lives to take the City of Mexico.

"If the war starts I am very anxious to raise a company and go; there is nothing that would suit me better. Governor Colquitt says that if Wilson will only turn the whole matter over to him he will guarantee to prosecute the war to a successful finish with soldiers all from Texas, and I really believe he could do it."

Six Babies Born.

Fred Reiss, of the Daily Courier office, is all smiles. It's a fine ten pound boy.

BROTHERHOOD ANNUAL BANQUET

The first annual banquet of the Methodist Episcopal Brotherhood was held on Monday evening in the banquet room of the Bristol church, with a large attendance of members and friends.

The banquet was served by the ladies of the church with Mrs. Charles Brudon as matron, assisted by twenty-five young ladies as waitresses. The room had been tastefully decorated with red and white crepe paper, the colors of the Brotherhood, and American flags. Potted plants adorned the tables and these, with the young ladies dressed in white, fitting to and fro, added charm to the occasion. The following menu was served: Grape fruit, celery, olives, clam chowder, tenderloin of beef with mushroom sauce, green peas, baked potatoes, sherbet, chicken salad in tomato cups, strawberry shortcake, ice cream and coffee.

During the evening a delightful musical programme was rendered with the following participants: Miss Rachel Brodhead, Mrs. James Shipe, B. Frank Conner, Jr., James Guy, Miss Ella Thornton, Howard Coonts, Mrs Gertrude Lefferts, James Lefferts and William Lefferts.

Baron Green acted as toastmaster, and following remarks by Rev. Dr. Brodhead, introduced Rev. William S. Bovard, of New York City, the corresponding secretary of the Methodist Brotherhood, who spoke on "The Brotherhood of Man," in which he appealed for the care of the boys of America.

Rev. Dr. John G. Wilson was then introduced and made a very interesting address, in which he said "Men want to know Christ, but we have not been measuring up to our ability. We have only been playing church. Too many of us put the responsibility on the pastor. There will be no occasion for doubt if men will measure up to their responsibility."

The local brotherhood is growing steadily and is exerting an influence in the work of the church. Charles B. White is president of the local chapter.

DISPLAY YOUR FLAGS TOMORROW

Burgess Thomas Scott has issued a proclamation calling for a general recognition of Memorial Day tomorrow by displaying an American flag as follows:

Saturday, May 30th, will be observed as Memorial Day, and it is a fitting tribute to those survivors, who are still with us, and to those of their comrades in whose memory these celebrations are held, that the day should be observed in an appropriate manner. Not as an occasion of joy and feasting but rather as a silent tribute to those lives which were sacrificed that a nation might be saved.

I would respectfully request that every citizen, who can possibly do so, display an American flag upon their residence or place of business on that day.

Not only in commemoration of our brave soldiers and sailors but also as an act of patriotism and love of country, which should be instilled in the hearts of all.

THOMAS SCOTT,
Chief Burgess.

She was the daughter of Sarah Todd Elsegood, who was the first female class leader in the Methodist Episcopal church in America, and was appointed as such in the old Union Methodist church of Philadelphia, more than fifty years ago. Mrs. Dungan was married in 1854 and went to California, where her husband was engaged in business. She was very active in church work while in California and also upon her return to the east. The funeral services were held at the residence of her son, Charles P. Dungan, 558 Bath street, on Tuesday afternoon, Rev. George M. Brodhead, officiating. Interment was made in Bristol cemetery. Born in Bensalem township Mrs. Williams had spent her entire life in and near Bristol and was well known throughout this section. In early life she became a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and for many years took an active part, until advancing years required her to relinquish active work. She is survived by six children, William, Samuel, John, Philip, Joseph and Mrs. Mary Barton, also nineteen grandchildren and as many great-grandchildren. Not a Suffrage Leader.

Editor Gazette:—The article which appeared in the Daily Courier on Wednesday evening stating that Mrs. Henry E. Ancker was the leader of the Suffrage Study Class in Bristol, was a gross mis-statement. Mrs. Ancker is not the leader, nor has she any intention of becoming such.

MRS. HENRY E. ANCKER.

SENIOR CLASS HONORS W. V. LEECH

High School Graduating Class Held a Reception for President of School Board.

Whenever the Senior class of the Bristol high school undertakes an affair it is always carried out successfully, and so the reception given to Mr. Leech, president of the school board, Tuesday evening proved no exception to this rule.

The reception was held in the high school hall which was decorated with palms, the high school and the 1914 colors.

After a short informal reception the president of the class, Francis Callahan, gave the address of welcome, in which he thanked Mr. Leech for the many kindnesses he had shown the class, especially during the recent trip to Washington. They had received so much pleasure from being able to go and return in a parlor car and to see "Peg O' My Heart," while in that city.

After the address was the following most interesting musical programme:

Orchestra.
Vocal solo, Winifred Callahan.
Piano solo, Gertrude Lefferts.
Orchestra.
Vocal solo, B. F Connor, Jr.
Song, class of 1914.
Orchestra.

The song given by the class was a humorous one about their Washington trip, and as an encore they sang the chorus from "Peg O' My Heart."

At the conclusion of the programme refreshments were served. At the rear of the hall tables had been arranged to form an L and here the guests were seated. The president acted as toastmaster and called on the various guests for speeches. As no one had been asked previously to respond to the toasts, the unexpectedness added much interest to the speeches. Mr. Leech opened the banquet with a short story, then Mr. Green told of some of the many funny experiences that occurred on the trip and concluded his remarks with a tribute to Mr. Leech's kindness. Miss Baggs next spoke and wished the class God speed on the way in life. Other speakers in order were: Charles E. Scott, who was, as usual, entertaining to his hearers: Burgess Thomas Scott, Dr. LeCompte, Miss Vanuxem, Mr. Taylor, Miss Parks, Miss Bartine, Mr. Boov and Miss Robinson.

The guests included the entire Washington party, the directors, Miss Baggs, Miss Parks and Miss Robinson.

BRISTOL CHURCH MAKES OBJECTION

Rebels Against Appointment of Philadelphia Preacher to Succeed Rev. J. A. Browne.

At the recent session of the A. M. E. conference held in Reading, Rev J. A. Browne was transferred to New Bedford, Mass. This action was not satisfactory to the members of the local church, and on Wednesday evening a meeting was held with Presiding Elder W. H. Davis presiding. Such strong objection was made to the new appointee, Rev C. B. Monk, of Philadelphia, that the elder declared the pulpit of Bethel church, this borough, vacant. The action of the church and Elder Davis has been referred to Bishop Evans Tyrie, in hopes that he will reconsider his appointment and return Rev. Browne to Bristol. Rev. Browne has been in Bristol one year and in that time has done good work.

OFFICIAL COUNT OF ELECTION VOTE

Light Vote Polled—Burton's Big Run a Surprise to Organization.

The official count of the vote cast at the primary election on May 19, begun by County Commissioners Barndt, Davis and Richards and Clerks Washington Cadwallader and J. Purdy Weiss at noon on Friday, was completed shortly after 6 o'clock on Saturday evening. The figure totals show that all parties cast light votes. On United States Senator, head of the ticket, the total Democratic poll is 2674; Republican, 3631, and Washington party, 430. The totals for other leading offices vary only slightly from these figures.

JUDGESHIP VOTE.

On the non-partisan ballot Judge Gustav A. Endlich, of Reading, made a nice run for Judge of the Supreme Court, though his vote is smaller than it was generally expected he would receive. This is accounted for by the fact that the Republican organization on the eve of the primary sent word to its followers in Bucks county to support Judge Kunkel, of Harrisburg.

For Judge of the Superior Court, Judge Frank M. Trexler, of Allentown, received a very large vote. This was due not only to the high personal esteem in which the Lehigh jurist is held in Bucks, but also to the friendly, neighborly feeling which has always existed between the two adjoining counties.

THE DEMOCRATIC VOTE.

The official count confirms the unofficial figures of the Democratic vote hitherto published. State Committeeman A. Mitchell Palmer carries the county for United States Senator over Henry I. Budd by a majority of 488 and Vance McCormick has 345 majority over Michael J. Ryan for the Lieutenant Governor nomination, due likely to the Granger influence.

The figures on the Congress vote remain as heretofore published—Grim, 1779, and Difenderfer, 933, the Bucks countian having 786 majority

On the Republican ticket Penrose and Brumbaugh lead their ticket. The slated candidates for Congressmen-at-large have big majorities.

For Congress Watson has a plurality of 2714 over Strassburger and a majority of 2604 over both Strassburger and Sutton.

MACHINE SURPRISED.

The Republican machine was greatly surprised at the strength developed by A. Russell Burton, of Tullytown, for representative in the General Assembly. Burton was on both the Republican and Washington party tickets, polling 680 on the Republican and 409 on the Washington party ticket—a total of 1089. This big vote, Washington party leaders say, is some indication of the strength of that party and shows that their claim that their party will poll at least 3000 votes in the county next November is substantiated.

The attempt of Senator Clarence J. Buckman's friends to capture the Washington party nomination for State Senator ended in a fiasco, Dr. J. E. Scott, the Washington party man, coming out victor by 50 majority. The fact that an error in Dr. Scott's petition compelled his friends to write his name on the ballot gave the Buckman schemers a coveted chance to put his name on the Washington party ballot, but the trick failed to work.

The totals of the vote cast follows:

COMFORTING WORDS.

Many a Bristol Household Will Find Them So.

To have the pains and aches of a bad back removed—to be entirely free from annoying, dangerous urinary disorders, is enough to make any kidney sufferer grateful. The following advice of one who has suffered will prove comforting words to hundreds of Bristol readrs.

James F. Hanns, 117 Rushing street, Trenton, N. J., says: "Some years ago I strained my back and it affected my kidneys. If I sat or lay down for a little while, I could hardly straighten. In the morning I had more trouble than at any other time. My kidneys were weak and I felt tired and languid. I read so much about the good Doan's Kidney Pills had done others that I got a box and in a few days I commenced to feel more like myself. One box of Doan's Kidney Pills drove kidney trouble completely out of my system. I have taken a few doses of Doan's Kidney Pills off and on since then and they have kept my kidneys in good shape."

BIG SALARIES PAID TO TEXTILE EXPERTS

Trained Men Wanted in the World's Second Largest Industry.

If Horace Greeley lived today his advice would be "enter the textile field, young man," rather than "go west." Bigger than business—better than professions—larger salaries—brighter futures, nothing holds forth greater inducements to the young man about to choose his life's work than the unlimited textile field.

A practical course in textiles is the short, sure road to high salaried positions and mill ownerships. Mill owners have come to depend on practical textile schools to supply men capable of solving the many complex but interesting problems of the profession from designing to selling the products.

The most noted of these schools and the pioneer is the Philadelphia Textile School, of the Pennsylvania Museum and School of Industrial Art, at Broad and Pine streets, Philadelphia. This school is known throughout the world for the high-class, practical textile men it annually sends out.

Anyone can learn about the great textile industry and what it offers to young men by writing to the school for information.—Adv.

SHOCKING THE SALAMBOS

Deed of Vengeance and Its Happy Sequel

By ROBERT J PEARSALL

Copyright by Frank A Munsey Co

Andrew Hemphill glanced at the gaudy posters outside of the Gaiety theater invited to pass on hesitated saw the sign five cents above the ticket window turned in paid his nickel and entered the folding doors

Then he leaned back in his seat and stared at the white curtain on which moving pictures would presently be thrown and in a few moments saw shaping there a little private moving picture of his own so distasteful that he fought against the illusion for a while and then resigned himself to it as he had many times before, and let his mind run riot

His father was the village merchant. At two he been offered the choice between clerkship in the store and apprenticeship as teller and all round man in the village bank In an evil hour he had chosen the latter

Still for two years everything had gone well He had followed the letter and spirit of his work contented himself to but still be following it ill—

At the thought a snarl disfigured his face If had not been for John Barton he years he had been saying that

Years of disfavor of his life he traced it all to this one case When he found himself penniless and hungry he mutely cursed the world

When he lay on freezing nights shivering for lack of money to hire him self to be he blamed it on John Barton

It was a simple story John Barton was the president They two were the only officers of the bank the only ones save the president who had access to the funds There had been a robbery Andrew had been arrested

Part of the money was found in his room

He found it impossible to account for his action on the night of the robbery He held to contended away by a faked message

It was clearly a frameup against him and by whom but John Barton? But he did not prove it

Arrest and imprisonment he lost his nerve The jail was cold and rickety and one night he pried the bars away with a piece of the iron bathtub He escaped but only into a larger prison

For to him, penniless friendless with a price on his head offered by the bankers association of which he shuddered to think the freedom which he gained proved less desirable than the confinement from which he had fled

Pursued by misfortune haunted always by dread of recognition and ar

rest he drifted from place to place a nondescript wanderer sometimes a worker sometimes a tramp

His life was ruined and he knew it. And for it ruin he hated himself, and he hated doubly with a hatred that had through years of brooding grown into a monomania its first cause, John Barton

The curtain ran up and the show began A short skirted singer and a black faced comedian appeared An drew stirred restlessly and wished himself safe in the streets

There followed a mediocre juggler and a man who went through the uninteresting process of being tied and shackled in various ways and then releasing himself And then the feature bill of the evening was announced "The great Salambos

Andrew straightened himself with a convulsive start that caused his neighbors on either side to look at him apprehensively for in the stage person age bowing from the side of the stage and smilingly introducing his own act he recognized John Barton

It was impossible but it was true

The same face the same figure the same voice the same— Andrew strained his eyes—the same scar above the right eyebrow

And while Andrew strove against the leash of his will, longing to spring upon the stage and throttle the man who had so wronged him but holding himself nevertheless in his seat, the Salambos retired the lights were dimmed and the act began

Through a hazy mist of blood Andrew saw the rest of the performance

He saw the great Salambos envelope in a mystic halo of yellow light move stilly upon the stage

He heard the hated voice chanting monotonously the explanation of his feats

'I am the human salamander," he said, 'the man who is impervious to fire, heat and electricity Now I grasp those glowing balls white heated by 5 000 volts from your own city power house, five times the amount required to electrocute the ordinary man

"To touch me now would mean instant death Now I blow flames from my mouth to prove that my body is like a raging furnace Now I ignite this cloth from my finger tip this cigar this candle Now—

It was really a my fifying performance but Andrew at first paid little attention to it

He only knew that his enemy was before him unsuspecting and in his power

But toward the last of the act an idea began to form an idea so devilish that at first he recoiled from it but so satisfying to his almost insane craving for revenge that he could not rid himself of it

It was a continuous vaudeville show and he sat through two performances

When he finally left the idea had shaped itself But as yet his unaccustomed mind only dallied with it

The knowledge that he could do the thing was a pleasing fillip to his imagination Its actual performance was impossible as yet

It is an old, old story Night after night he came to the Gaiety sat unheeding through the first few acts sat with strained attention through the performance of the Salambos nursing, his hatred gloating over his enemy meanwhile toming his mind to the first impossible deed

He could not sleep he could not eat he could think of nothing but his revenge

One of Andrew's many occupations had been that of a tall whom the man so he went about it task that night In a workmanlike manner that excited no curiosity in the minds of those that happened to notice him

He had timed the performance accurately

At the exact moment that John Barton appeared on the stage of the Gaiety in the character of the Salambos Andrew reached the top of a high pole just outside of the theater

He seated himself astride the cross piece bearing the heavy cables insulated, but alive with deadly energy

From one of these cables a small wire branched off into the Gaiety supplying that building with light and also, as Andrew had earned with the electricity used by the Salambos in his act

Andrew, equipped with insulated pliers and heavy rubber gloves removed the insulation from the small wire and from another cable with practiced hands

Then he attached to other short wire he had brought with him to the exposed stretch of cable

He waited a moment. There was a burst of applause from within the theater

He knew what that marked the first exhibition of immunity on the part of the Salambos the seizing of the electrically heated balls.

Instantly he dropped the wire from his pliers upon the exposed surface of the wire that led into the Gaiety knowing that it would send 10 000 additional volts of electricity crashing through the body of his enemy

There was a crackling sound like a thousand firecrackers

A sudden white light flared through the screened windows of the theater

The applause died out to a sickening silence, and Andrew heard the sound of a heavy fall

Then came sudden screams and hoarse shouts and a sharp slam that Andrew knew for the hasty dropping of an asbestos curtain

From out the exits of the theater poured a panic stricken mob and Andrew dropped unobserved into its midst. And, as he listened to the excited exclamations that came to him from every side his madness dropped from him, and he saw himself for what he was—a murderer'

It's what comes of playing with death!' said one man

"It must have killed him instantly said another "Why when he dropped there seemed nothing left of him His clothes went that quick like a flash Lord, I can see it now'

'Here come the fire men Make way, make way there"

Andrew slunk away up a side street Of a sudden he was very sick.

He leaned weakly against the side of a building and men passing thought him drunk

Why had he done it? Why why? Revenge? Revenge on whom? I

What? He could not remember

He had killed the Salambos, they said Who was the Salambos? What matter? He had killed him He was a murderer He had killed killed—

After awhile he recovered to a certain extent and staggered away

His memory came back too and he knew whom he had killed and why but it brought only fresh torture.

John Purton—why he had played with John Burton as a boy! And he had killed him No no impossible!

But yes he had killed the Salambos and the Salambos was John Burton and John Burton was the Salambos, and—

He found himself repeating this ridiculous aloud and checked himself in terror

He saw people whom he met looking at him curiously and tried to get a grip on himself

But he felt weak He wanted to go home to his room but he was afraid somebody or something might meet him there

He wanted to go into a saloon and get a drink It might steady him but again he was afraid

He walked and walked Some times he believed he was running

He left the down town district far behind

His path now led him through long rows of deserted houses filled with sleeping people Sleeping He would never be able to sleep again

Rooms passed By the flickering street light he could see his watch It was 4 o'clock Soon it would be day light

All night long he had been on his feet

How could he face the light? Stripped of its mantle of darkness would not his guilt blazon itself to every eye?

'ARE YOU REALLY ALIVE? HE HALF WHISPERED

But when the first sickly light of morning of it over the city he stopped and grasped and rested back against a telephone pole

For the instinct of the criminal had asserted itself his unguided steps had shaped themselves to a circle and he was standing in front of the Gaiety theater

At the realization and at the sight of the dangling wires above that proclaimed the method of his crime he nearly fell

For fully five minutes he stood with eyes staring and mouth agape

Then something snapped in his brain like a cord and the strain relaxed He would hide his guilt no longer With jiggly but determined steps he started away headed straight for the police station

But his body went from its all night walk such it could to halt him

At the first street corner he stopped and leaned against a building waiting for a car

A trolley whirled down the street Andrew saw it without realization and when it stopped in front of him and the occupant sprang out he still paid no attention

It was only when he heard his own name called loudly that he roused himself with a start of terrified amazement

For the voice was John Barton's voice and the figure approaching him with outstretched hand was John Barton's figure

But John Barton was dead!

His hand however was warm and his voice was anything but the voice of a corpse

'Andrew' As I live Andrew Hemphill! You know me don't you Andy? Come brace up! Hey you to the chauffeur give me a hand here The man's fainted'

When Andrew recovered consciousness he was in the Harbor Emergency hospital and his hand was enveloped in the hand of the man whom he had thought he had murdered

Are you really alive? he half whispered

Me? It's you that's the dead on from appearances What on earth was the matter

'I thought —

You don't mean to say that you thought you were still wanted back home? Lord! You've been cleared long ago

The president of the bank died and left a confession in that he was the guilty one that he had been short in his accounts and failed the robbers to cover the shortage, and tried to enter his own steps by throwing the blame on you

Of course there's a technical charge of jail breaking against you but that won't amount to a thing And as old father Barton's crazy to find you We'll go back together I've got to go back east and have another dummy made my way and so —

Another dummy

Yes Don't you know that you're talking to the great Salambos? Andrew civilized Well you are and some crazy fool switched on about 20 000 volts of electricity last night and I used the dummy that the switch e thought was myself into a crisp

The papers are full of it this morning Its spoiled my graft now on the coast anyway until they forget about it and so —

But Andrew had fainted again

A Personage

She loomed big in the eye of the public and occupied no inconsiderable space in the community

Weighed in the balance she was never found wanting nor could any accuse her of lightness

Her husband declared that she was altogether too much for him

Her banker found in her a woman of substance

Her pastor deemed her a well rounded character

Her admirers called her a great lady

And the women all called her fat.—Lippincott's

Children's Eyes

It is not at all uncommon to consider a child stupid blame him for lack of interest in his studies, or even to punish him for outbursts of temper, when defective vision is the only cause. Medical inspection of school children has shown that 15 per cent are suffering from bad eyesight, undiscovered until the school doctor calls it to the attention of the parents.—Woman's Home Companion.

ELECTIONS IN FRANCE.

They Are Held on Sunday and Rarely Finished In One Day.

In France elections are held on Sunday Universal manhood suffrage is the rule Every Frenchman of twenty-one years of age on proof of six months' residence, is a legal voter at the elections to the chamber, saving only soldiers on active service and others disqualified for bankruptcy and criminal reasons Because of the number of candidates the first day's polling in many districts is not final Where no candidate receives an absolute majority, a second election is held. It often happens that from one-third to one fourth of the elections for deputies are not finally decided until the second poll when not infrequently one or more candidates in a district have withdrawn

The polling begins at 8 in the morning and lasts until 6 in the evening Instead of regularly appointed clerks and election officials three volunteers take charge of the "urn" in which the ballots are deposited and conduct the proceedings One of the penalties of being first to appear is the likelihood of being impressed into service as one of the assessors of whom two, both independent voters must serve with the president of the ballot.' The counting of the ballots is also done by volunteers called for from among the electors

In the absence of the party system it is difficult strictly to classify the candidates In a general way they range themselves in groups around certain well known political leaders.—New York World

STRUCK FROM THE ROLLS.

What Happens to an English Lawyer When He Goes Wrong

When a solicitor passes his examinations his name is entered on the rolls' of the legal profession Should he ever become guilty of professional misconduct his name is "struck off the rolls' It is a grave matter Any person having a complaint against a solicitor in reference to his professional conduct is supposed to forward it to the Incorporated Law society, the body which rules the legal profession. His private life doesn't trouble the society unless he is convicted of a criminal offense

Having received the complaint and evidence in support of it, the society brings the matter before a divisional court composed of two or three of the most distinguished judges on the bench The solicitor is given every chance of defending himself but if, after hearing the evidence the judges decide that he is guilty his name is "struck from the rolls Should the offense be a minor one, caused more by misunderstanding than fraud, the solicitor may be suspended for a period and allowed to practice again at the expiration of it.

A solicitor cannot be 'struck off the rolls" for negligence or bankruptcy A client's remedy in the first case is to bring an action against him for damages Bankruptcy is adjudged to be a misfortune and therefore is not "professional misconduct." — London Tit Bits

Where His Love Lay.

He was sitting in front of a brightly burning fire talking to her After a while he said thoughtfully

"This reminds me of a grate that I used to sit in front of years ago"

"I can well imagine how you enjoyed those evenings" she responded hopefully, 'open fires give one such a sense of home." But he went on talking of drafts and heat and ashes and the hygienic condition of a room ventilated by a fireplace

"I have never known a grate," he continued, "like the one in the home of the girl where I used to go so often"

A long silence followed the crackling of the fire the only sound in the room It was broken at last by him in a voice that had echoes of a dear memory in its tones 'You cannot imagine how I loved that—grate'"—New York Post.

Abelard and Heloise.

Heloise was noted as much for her intellectual ability as for her personal beauty She was familiar with the literature of four or five languages—Italian, French, Greek Latin and Hebrew Her knowledge was remarkable, her conversational powers were brilliant. It was her bright mind and varied learning that first attracted the attention of Abelard Abelard died in 1142 Heloise in 1164. First buried at St. Marcel, Abelard's remains were shifted several times but finally reached the well known tomb at Pere la Chaise wherein also rest the ashes of Heloise

LONDON'S UGLY CHURCH.

The First Sacred Edifice in the World to Be Lighted by Gas

Readers of 'Our Mutual Friend will remember that Dickens gives a whimsical description of St John's, Westminster, when referring to the home of the doll's dressmaker, Miss Jenny Wren

In this region' he writes, are a certain little street called Church street and a certain little blind square called Smith square in the center of which just retreat is a very hideous church, with four towers at the four corners generally resembling some petrified monster frightful and gigantic on its back with its legs in the air

Lord Chesterfield said St John's reminded him of an elephant with its legs in the air and Charles Mathews likened it to a dining table in the same position

St. John's enjoys the distinction of being the first sacred edifice in the world to be lit by gas As may be imagined the introduction of the new illuminant was deeply resented by many conservative spirits some of whom went so far as to describe it as a sacrilege —Manchester (England) Courier

A Story About Rodin

The Cri de Paris tells a most amusing story if true about Rodin and some unnamed rich American woman who had selected him to make a statue of herself, full length and so far as possible a portrait. She had posed ten times in antique costume when Rodin told her that he did not need her any more and that he would finish the work at his leisure. When the American came again she found to her amazement that the head of the statue bore no resemblance whatever to her She complained bitterly that no one would even recognize her "It is true," said the great sculptor dreamily "Your head did not inspire me at all. At first I thought I would not put any head on the statue, but after I had thought it over carefully, in order not to offend you I put in place of your face that of Mme. de R She had ordered hers of me, but never paid for it. At any rate, you will gain much by this change!"

The Superior Subordinate.

"There is no more valuable subordinate than the man to whom you can give a piece of work and then forget about it, in the confident expectation that the next time it is brought to your attention it will come in the form of a report that the thing has been done," says Gifford Pinchot. When this master quality is joined to executive power, loyalty and common sense the result is a man whom you can trust. On the other hand, there is no greater nuisance to a man heavily burdened with the direction of affairs than the weak backed assistant who is continually trying to get his chief to do his work for him, on the feeble plea that he thought the chief would like to decide this or that himself The man to whom an executive is most grateful, the man whom he will work hardest and value most, is the man who accepts responsibility willingly" — Engineering News.

Queer Talismans in Malta.

There are still to be found in Malta a number of small stones shaped and colored like the eyes tongues and other parts of serpents. The superstitious among the Maltese connect these with the tradition that St. Paul when shipwrecked was cast on their island, and it was there that while lighting a bundle of sticks for a fire a viper fastened on the apostle's hand. St. Paul calmly shook the reptile off into the flames, and no harm followed. The natives wear these stones as talismans, in which character they suppose them serviceable in warding off dangers from snake bites and poisons They are found in St. Paul's cave embedded in clay and are set in rings and bracelets and when found to be in the shape of a tongue or liver or heart are hung around the neck

Taking a Mean Advantage

Once a thrifty Scotch physician was called to a case where a woman had dislocated her jaw He very soon put her right. The woman asked how much was to pay The doctor named his fee The patient thought it too much. He, however would not take less and as the woman refused to give him the fee he began to yawn Yawning, as every one knows, is infectious The young woman in turn yawned Her jaw again went out of joint and the doctor triumphantly said Now, until you hand me over my fee your jaw can remain as it is' Needless to say, the money was promptly paid.

During a snowstorm on the Highland railway a train was held up for an hour or so The guard a cheery Scot, passed along the carriages trying to keep up the spirits of the passengers An old gentleman unduly complained that if the train didn't go on he would 'die of cold

SENSITIVE SEISMOGRAPHS.

They Serve Other Purposes Than Recording Earthquakes

Contrary to popular belief earthquakes are by no means the most frequent disturbances of the earth's surface all practically all places on the earth experience some kind of tremor of greater or less intensity at least once an hour and lesser shake at least once an hour and lesser shake at least once an hour and lesser tremblings is ever more frequent This fact has been established since the opening the world of the seismographs which record the slightest movement of the earth of ours

The seismographs can be made to serve several other useful purposes besides the recording of earthquakes Some of them are so delicate that a railroad train running a mile away will affect them

Seismograph records have frequently been produced in court to show that the operation of heavy machinery produced sufficient vibration in near by buildings to make the owners of the factory liable for damages

Probably the most unusual purpose to which the seismograph has ever been put is that of determining the amount of vibration in a locomotive as a result of unbalanced driving wheels Engineers have devised some ingenious methods of cutting down this objectionable which means a greatly decreased consumption of coal.—New York American

TALKING FROM THE CHEST.

Not Necessary to Put a Telephone Transmitter to the Mouth

In case one has occasion to speak to a telephone while talking not care to put the transmitter to the mouth he can make himself heard in very simple manner Simply place the abdomen or the chest against the mouthpiece of the transmitter and talk into the open air and the sound will get to the party on the other end The whole chest will fill and the wall of the abdomen will force it against the mouthpiece of the transmitter and it will sounding board and they will transmit the proper sound waves to the diaphragm This is easy to try and astonishing in result

Another peculiar thing noticed in telephones at times is phantom talk heard in receiver when one is waiting for central to give connection Odd scraps of conversations may be heard in this manner They are probably due to conversations going on over wires lying in close proximity to the one that you are using Such conversations sometimes sound startling currents which in the process of induction cause sound Similarly currents to talk in every line of life character —New York World

Few Beds in Bagdad

About 60 per cent of Bagdad's population possess no beds Those poor people rest on blankets spread on the floors of their houses in the winter and on the roofs in the summer Owing to the excessive heat of these regions sleep is made impossible elsewhere than on the roof or in the open gardens It is not interesting night to see how the women and children of their houses to prepare the evening meal on the roof and spread the bedding for the night Inasmuch as the climate is very dry there is little to fear from exposure to the night air While a considerable number of the roofs are surrounded by latticework to insure a certain amount of privacy by far the larger number are quite exposed to the gaze of curious and inquisitive neighbors

Scotland's Patron Saint

Why was St Andrew chosen as the patron saint of Scotland This question has been asked many times but the archdeacon of Moray Dunn Hole tells many he considered to have discovered the most satisfactory solution of the problem Gentlemen said he the was speaking at St Andrew's day banquet at the time I have given this difficult subject my thoughtful consideration and I have come to the conclusion that St Andrew was chosen to be the patron saint of Scotland because he discovered the lad who had the loaves and fishes Dundee Advertiser

ONE SORT OF MURDER.

It Doesn't Take Human Life but It Shortens Its Usefulness.

Several well known financial men were talking the other day when the name of a man well known in the street for his proclivity to take up valuable time of friends with useless discussions about nothing was mentioned

One of the men in the party prominent in business and finance at once burst out with 'That man' He's a murderer'

"What's that' said another "I never heard that he had killed any one unless he talked them to death.'

"I mean just what I say He's a murderer on the installment plan," came the answer

The speaker was begged to explain, and he said "I have just so many days to live, and all of them are filled with business of importance That man comes in and steals my time, and I claim that he has just as much murdered me as if some time in the future he had struck me down, for the time he talks with his nonsense is that much gone out of my life and is lost. I say that he is a murderer on the installment plan'

And when the other members of the party recalled the many times they had been treated in the same way by the man under discussion they agreed with the first man in his verdict.—Wall Street Journal

Westminster Abbey's Prizefighter

Observant visitors to Westminster Abbey may have noticed in one of the groups of statuary near the north door of the edifice a remarkable urn on one of the figures Not a few people have thought that it was an exaggerated model of a limb, but as a matter of fact it was actually modeled from the arm of a verger at the abbey, named John Burton who at one time was champion prizefighter of England Burton was the dean's verger and on one occasion he was asked if he would like to be buried in the abbey Burton replied in the affirmative and also asked that the fact that he was champion prizefighter of England should be inscribed on his tomb To this the dean actually consented, but when the time came it was decided by the chapter that the inscription should be omitted. Burton, however, was buried in the abbey, although there is nothing on the tombstone to indicate who or what he was.—London Opinion.

Inhaling Spaghetti.

There is a popular belief to the effect that the Neapolitan eats his spaghetti by a deft process of wrapping thirty or forty inches round the tines of his fork and then lifting it inboard an ell at a time This is not correct. The true Neapolitan does not eat his spaghetti at all, he inhales it. He gathers up a loose strand and starts it down his throat. He then respires from the diaphragm, and, like a troupe of trained angleworms that entire mass of spaghetti uncoils itself gets up off the plate and disappears inside him—en masse, as it were—and makes him look like a man who is chinning himself over a set of bead portieres I fear that we in America will never learn to siphon our spaghetti into us thus It takes a nation that has practiced deep breathing for centuries.—Irvin S Cobb in Saturday Evening Post.

Unfair Handicap

Willie had resigned his position in the big bakery, where he labored in the pie department, and had gone to work in a carpenter's shop for smaller wages The social investigator having heard about Willie questioned him

"Aren't you sorry you left the bakery and came to this shop?' she asked kindly

"No'm," Willie answered quickly

"But you get less money"

"Yes'm."

"Well, what was the matter with the bakery?"

"'Twuz this way," explained Willie "it hurt my mouth I wuz in de pie part, de cherry pie part, an' I had to stone cherries An' dey got a rule over dere dat all de boys has to whistle all de time dey's workin, so as to show dey ain't eatin' no cherries"—Popular Magazine.

Fiji Islanders' Sugar Cane Dance

A very curious and exceedingly clever dance may be witnessed in Fiji called by the natives the sugar cane meke" or sugar cane dance It represents the growth of the sugar cane. In the first figure the dancers squat low on the ground shake their heads shut their eyes and murmur slowly and softly an unintelligible sentence. Gradually they all stand up together growing taller and taller, and as they "grow they wave their arms and tremble all over from ankle to head, like the tall, tasseled cane waving in the wind, and still they keep on chanting louder and louder The last figure represents a series of combats meant to symbolize the exactions of the chiefs who compel the 'kaisi willing and unwilling, to come and cut their crops.—London Standard.

Etruscan Vases.

The famous Etruscan vases were wrongly named for though made in Etruria they were the productions of Greek genius They are elegant in form and enriched with bands of beautiful foliage and other ornaments figures and similar objects of a highly artistic character One class has black figures and ornaments on a red ground —the natural color of the clay another has the figures of the natural color and the ground painted black. The former class belong to a date about 600 B C the latter date about a century later and extend over a period of some 300 or 350 years.

Jefferson and the Lawyers

In the "Autobiography of Jefferson" is this passage

"I served with General Washington in the legislature of Virginia before the Revolution," wrote Jefferson, and during it with Dr Franklin in congress I never heard either of them speak ten minutes at a time, nor to any but the main point which was to decide the question They laid their shoulders to the great points, knowing that the little ones would follow of themselves If the present congress errs in too much talking how can it be otherwise in a body to which the people send 150 lawyers, whose trade it is to question everything yield nothing, talk by the hour? That 150 lawyers should do business together ought not to be expected."
